Scott Foresman-Addison Wesley Elementary Mathematics. What Works Clearinghouse Intervention Report "Scott Foresman-Addison Wesley Elementary Mathematics" is a core curriculum for students at all ability levels in prekindergarten through grade 6. The program supports students' understanding of key math concepts and skills and covers a range of mathematical content across grades. The What Works Clearinghouse (WWC) reviewed 12 studies on "Scott Foresman-Addison Wesley Elementary Mathematics" for elementary students. Two of these studies meet WWC evidence standards; one study meets WWC evidence standards with reservations; the remaining nine studies do not meet either WWC evidence standards or eligibility screens. Based on the three studies, the WWC found mixed effects in mathematics achievement for elementary students. Appendices include: (1) Study characteristics; (2) Outcome measures for the mathematics achievement domain; (3) Summary of findings included in the rating for the mathematics achievement domain; (4) Summary of subgroup findings for the mathematics achievement domain; and (5) "Scott Foresman-Addison Wesley Elementary Mathematics" rating for the mathematics achievement domain. The book is the outcome of a high-profile series of seminars on raising standards in literacy, and includes contributions from an impressive group of international researchers and policymakers. By offering a rich and unique mix of contemporary perspectives on literacy education, this book provides an invaluable source of study and insight into the latest research and developments in the teaching of literacy. It includes sections on: * how research into literacy teaching can inform new approaches found in England, the USA and Australia * the ways in which literacy education is developing in England, the USA and Australia * the issues involved in assessing progress in literacy and the validity of research claims made about standards of attainment. The book celebrates the apparent success of current literacy initiatives at the same time as raising questions about the feasibility and relevance of such initiatives to the literacy co-ordinators and consultants and for all those undertaking further study or research in literacy education. ... The goal was to design a framework that could provide a glimpse of the competencies that will define best-in-class performance 5 to 10 years into the future. The approach would take into consideration external factors such as the anticipated evolution of a discipline, anticipated future practices being brought upon by new technologies, and other trends. In the particular study that is described in this report, these insights were captured from the perspectives of both top practitioners in the field and top faculty members who conduct research and educate the next era of practitioners. This report takes you deep into the intricacies of the process and describes in detail the methodology and the tools that were used to synthesize the competency model and distill its components. The report is technical and requires a basic understanding of statistics to fully comprehend the analysis component of the study. For more information and downloadable content, please visit: www.B2Bcompetencies.com. First, the study sought to generate and critically analyze a concise, systematic and rigorous multi-method approach to future-oriented competency/capability modeling. The next phase of the study entailed using this hybrid methodology to forecast a model that profiles exemplary B2B marketing using a prospective naturalistic inquiry methodology. Agreement within the groups was measured for each competency in order to assess levels of consensus, differences within the groups were measured to identify controversial competencies, and inter-rater reliability was measured to assess the consistency of the ratings. Competencies were clustered in order of importance and a "competency kernel" was identified. The Delphi expert panels represented three continents and a wide range of knowledge domains within the broader B2B marketing field. The design of the competency model entailed three main steps: construction, de-construction, and reconstruction. In the construction phase, 153 competencies were identified, arranged into 17 functional clusters, and rated. Using the quantitative data, the model was deconstructed and its various parts examined. It was later reconstructed based on the results of the analysis. Since a large number of competencies were identified, the data were analyzed and broken down into a series of perspectives with more manageable chunks of data.- Perspective A, the "Emergent Systems Model" [ESM], was very pragmatic and depicted the analysis from the lens of a practitioner. It also included anecdotes from panelists who wanted to further reinforce or illustrate their unique point of view. - Perspective B, the "Emergent Model" [EM], offered a view of the model from the lens of a quantitative researcher. It was based on the ratings that were collected during the last two Delphic iterations. This view depicted the model from a more rigid aspect, constructed strictly from the quantitative data.- Perspective C, the "Emergent Functional Model" [EFM], looked at the data from the lens of an educator. This last view of the model aimed to segregate knowledge domains within business marketing and start a discussion on some of the epistemological implications of the results of the study. The EFM and the ESM blur the line between individual and organizational competencies. Future-oriented competency/capability models can be a potent enabler in the planning of business transformation efforts, whether the change stems from external forces (such as the markets or industry) or is being catalyzed from within the organization. Future-oriented competency ecosystems can provide the linchpin that connects the human capital components of a business transformation effort to the strategic, operational, and technological components of the change. *Social Studies Communities Pearson Scott

Grade 3 Seeing is Believing In the Company of Scholars The Struggle for the Soul of Higher Education University of Texas Press "I began this book to articulate my sense of disappointment and alienation from the status I had fought so hard to achieve." A remarkable admission from an alumnus of Harvard Law School who has held tenured professorships in the law schools of Yale and Stanford and has taught in the law schools of Harvard and Chicago. In this personal reflection on the status of higher education, Julius Getman probes the tensions between status and meaning, elitism and egalitarianism, that challenge the academy and academics today. He shows how higher education creates a shared intellectual community among people of varied races and classes while simultaneously dividing people on the basis of education and status. In the course of his explorations, Getman touches on many of the most current issues in higher education today, including the conflict between teaching and research, challenges to academic freedom, the struggle over multiculturalism, and the impact of minority and feminist activism. Getman presents these issues through relevant, often humorous anecdotes, using his own and others' experiences in coping with the constantly changing academic landscape. Written from a liberal perspective, the book offers another side of the story told in such works as Allan Bloom's The Closing of the American Mind and Roger Kimball's Tenured Radicals. A probing and award-winning study, this new edition builds on the tradition of its predecessors to question the rightist resurgence in education while substantive updates throughout show how such policies continue to define our commonsense notions about what counts as a good school. A new preface and two full, new chapters address current controversies over curriculum and textbooks, and extend the discussion of previous editions to reflect on some of the most important pressures being placed on higher education as well. Apple also considers the recent conversion of some prominent neoliberal, neoconservative, and managerial thinkers to more critical understandings of educational policies, proving that progressive change is possible if we examine the roots of these ideologies in the first place. As insightful as it is thorough, Official Knowledge is a refreshing call to challenge the dominant forces within education today, as Apple powerfully illustrates how larger social movements are only possible if we purposefully and inclusively deepen our understanding of the existing body of knowledge about education. Nationalism and History Education Curricula and Textbooks in the United States and France Routledge History education, by nature, transmits an 'official' version of national identity. National identity is not a fixed entity, and controversy over history teaching is an essential part of the process of redefining and regenerating the nation. France and the United States have in particular experienced demographic and cultural shifts since the 1960s that have resulted in intense debates over national identity. This volume examines how each country's national history is represented in primary schools' social studies textbooks and curricula, and how they handle contemporary issues of ethnicity, diversity, gender, socio-economic inequality, and patriotism. By analyzing each country separately and comparatively, it demonstrates how various groups (including academics, politicians and citizen activists) have influenced education, and how the process of writing and rewriting history perpetuates a nation. Drawing on empirical studies of the United States and France, this volume provides insight into broader nationalist processes and instructive principles for similar countries in the modern world. World, Class, Women Global Literature, Education, and Feminism Routledge World, Class, Women begins the extraordinarily important task of bringing a postcolonial, feminist voice to critical pedagogy and, by extension explores how current debates about education could make a contribution to feminist thought. Robin Truth Goodman deftly weaves together the disciplines of literature, postcolonialism, feminism, and education in order to theorize how the shrinking of the public sphere and the rise of globalization influence access to learning, what counts as knowledge, and the possibilities of a radical feminism. New Series Improving Middle School Instruction A Research-based Self Assessment System National Education Assn This booklet reviews research on the middle school environment, the characteristics of the middle school student, and the factors involved in teaching effectively at the middle school level, and then proposes a method that middle school teachers can use for analyzing their own classroom behavior and their instructional options. The booklet's first chapter explains the differences between the middle school and the more traditional junior high school. Chapter 2 focuses on the cognitive, moral, and physical development that so drastically alters the attitudes, behaviors, and needs of middle school students. Chapter 3 reviews sets of teacher variables that three major research studies have associated with effective teaching. One of these sets of process variables is examined in greater detail in chapter 4, with particular reference to middle school instruction. The fifth chapter proposes a four-step method of self-assessment for teachers, involving self-diagnosis by teachers; feedback from supervisors, students, and colleagues; the formulation of recommendations for change; and implementation of the changes. Chapter 6 follows a hypothetical teacher through the self-assessment process. Appendixes include instruments from the Self-Assessment System and other evaluation programs. A 67-item bibliography is also provided. (PGD)
